

The Countess of Clonmel is shown here superintending the work in the "No Damage" laundry she has opened in Duke street, London.

Underwood & Underwood.

Underwood & Underwood.

This photograph shows the first meeting of the trustees and counsel of the Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation. From left to right: Sanford Freund, William J. Lowe, Nathan Smythe, Elmer Schlesinger, Joseph W. Powell, A. J. Frey, J. Barstow Smull, Harry S. Kimball and Edward P. Farley.

Mme. Penaherrera, wife of Senor Don L. A. Penaherrera, attache of the Legation of Ecuador at Washington. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. Perkins of New York.

(c) Clinedinst.

Neither Prince Eitel Friedrich nor Gen. Ludendorff believes that swords and military uniforms are out of fashion. Here they are, in the order named, at a monarchist demonstration in Berlin.

E. Peterffy.

Field Marshal Von Hindenburg recently gathered together the remnants of his old army in Oldenburg and reviewed them in full uniform. He is seen chatting with a veteran.

(c) Keystone View Co.

Gold Plates Fashion, ridden by Miss Phyllis M. Muller, winner at the Wayne county and Sullivan county shows. Miss Muller is the daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Wirth Muller of New York and Monticello.

Alice Manchester of Brockton, Mass., who is pictured here, raised this remarkable squash in the backyard of her home. It resembles in shape a brass horn.

International.

Above—Sir Edward Carson, out of politics for the present at least, and Lady Carson are living quietly in England at their recently purchased country house.

Fotograms.

At right—This is a view of Cleve Court, the English country house near Minster, in which Sir Edward and Lady Carson now make their home.

Fotograms.

This picture by Garcia y Ramos, painter of Seville, was given to Miss Eleanor Markell of the Plaza Hotel by the Quintero Brothers, famous Spanish playwrights. It is the painter's idea of "Malvaloca," the character in the play that made their first success.